SAYS CONGRESS IS HONEST

HOBOES THREW J. E. HOW OUT

They Didn't Like the Millionaire Leader's Ideas of Philanthropy—A "Philosophical Anarchist" How Says.

New Orleans.—James Eads How of St. Louis, the self-styled "millionaire hobo leader," who first organized "The Casual, Unskilled and Migratory Workers of the World," and called the first national hobo convention, was repudiated as a leader by the hoboes in convention here recently. How tried to inject socialism into the proceedings and was told to get out.

Tired of How and the fight between him and President Jeff Davis over the question of socialism, the hoboes broke up the convention of the "International Brotherhood Welfare Association," threw How and his principles out and organized a "hobo mass meeting." How said he was not a Socialist, but merely a "philosophical anarchist," and tried to tell the delegates that Jeff Davis was himself a dyed-in-the-wool Socialist. The hoboes, however, howled How down and stood by Davis. "Down with How and his postage stamp philanthropy, he has never given us any of his mythical millions," shouted Davis, and the hoboes yelled. "This ain't no political hot air gang," shouted one of the delegates, "and we ain't going to let you fellows spoil our convention."

President Davis said the convention had been called to consider the welfare of the "boys who are up against it," and he did not believe they should be "forced to listen to a lot of rot about socialism from those who have axes to grind."

After appropriating one dollar for the purchase of tobacco for hoboes in jail here the convention adjourned to meet in the open air on the river front the following afternoon.

MAKING THE LITTLE FARM PAY

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

FOR city men who seek homes in the country and for farmers of small means who wish to own the land which they till the little farm solves a serious problem of life. The choice of location is important. To get the best results it is necessary to be near at least one good town.

In modern conditions farming has to be made a business proposition. Even the city man who wishes a restful country home is seldom averse to having his land show a balance of profit. All farming ought to pay better than it does, and the operations of any one owning a small tract of land ought to show what may be realized by applying business methods to agriculture.

As land increases in value intensive farming will come more into vogue. The man of ordinary means who is getting started in agriculture must try to make forty acres accomplish what he would have used eighty or a hundred acres for in an earlier day.

The up to date plan of running a little farm is to have such a variety of products that the work is evenly distributed over the year and there is something to sell each week or month. A farmer with forty acres operating on the principle of diversification can show results as follows:

Fifty hogs, gross.....	$500
Milk from eight cows.....	1,000
Five hundred bushels of potatoes.....	400
Eggs and poultry.....	300
	$2,400

"Going to Law."

By a recent decision of the appellate division of the supreme court of New York it has been ordered that oleomargarine makers must not use artificial coloring. Neither may they use ingredients which will give a color to their stuff resembling butter.

Can persons renting farms by the year sell or dispose of hen or horse manure they have saved the last year? Is asked. The Rural New Yorker says: As a rule, unless some special arrangement is made, such manure is considered real estate and is to be left on the farm.

A contract always involves an offer made by one party and an acceptance of the offer by the other party. An offer which is not accepted by the party to whom it is made can be withdrawn by the party who made it. He can withdraw the offer at any time before acceptance.
